

Questions to ask in your organisation

If you're looking to strengthen your EDI efforts this month, here are some practical questions to consider:

☐

Is your consultation process accessible to everyone? Have you thought about providing Easy Read forms, surveys and questionnaires?

☐

Is your information clear and easy to understand, and can people find it easily? Have you thought about working with a specialist service, like Easy Read Online, to make your information clearer and support you to make it more accessible?

☐

Do your resources support pride and independence, or could they unintentionally reinforce stigma? Have you reviewed your language and images to make sure they are respectful, positive, and empowering?

☐

Have you included people with lived experience in your communication process? Could you involve people with learning disabilities in reviewing or co-creating your content?

☐

Are Easy Read versions a regular part of your work or something you only use occasionally? Can you build Easy Read into your communication planning from the start, rather than adding it at the end?
